2. Policy on Use of Artificial Intelligence (AI)

The Body Composition and Health Research Journal permits the use of AI tools (e.g., ChatGPT, Grammarly) for language editing or formatting under strict conditions:

Any detected overreliance on AI or misrepresentation of AI-assisted work may result in desk rejection or withdrawal of the manuscript.

AI cannot be credited as an author: AI and AI-assisted tools cannot be listed as authors. Only human beings can meet the criteria for authorship and be accountable for the work.

Authors remain fully responsible for the integrity, accuracy, and originality of the content: Authors should not use AI tools to generate content of a study. Data fabrication and falsification are considered serious research misconduct. If an AI tool was used in any way to support manuscript preparation, authors must carefully review, edit, and fact-check any outcomes generated by the AI tools. Authors must ensure that the output of any AI tool does not plagiarise or misrepresent existing work.

Authors must disclose any use of AI tool: If an AI tool was used in any way during the preparation of the manuscript, it must be disclosed in the cover letter and Acknowledgements section of the manuscript. Authors should describe the use as detailed as possible for transparency purposes. If AI was used as part of the research methodology (instead of generative AI tools for writing assistance), it should then be described in the Methods section.
